

There is no reason the FCC should remove any consumer protections that would in any way allow an increase of telemarketing calls. People who want more banking services can seek them out on their own. Do you FCC leaders like the calls you get for credit card offers? I have all the credit I need and I don't want anyone calling me trying to sell me more.